TIME Prime

Pride . . . it is a feeling. A respect for yourself and for your school that shows you care. It is an action. Like dressing up in your "Falcon" attire and sitting in 25° F weather just to support your team.

This type of pride is what made "prime times" at West Henderson High School. The pride was at times contagious and usually self-created. West Henderson Falcons displayed pride in academics, athletics, and just good times; these were the "prime times."

◀ Playing with fire, the "Falcon twirler", Brooke Cole, performs during half time.

▼ A little refreshment after school can be quite satisfying. Timmy Hensley, Leroy Gentry, and Andrew Werner take advantage of the new Pepsi machine.

▼ Desperate to get her room cleaned by the cheerleaders, Mrs. (Lynn) Moore tries to show she has more school spirit than the other teachers.

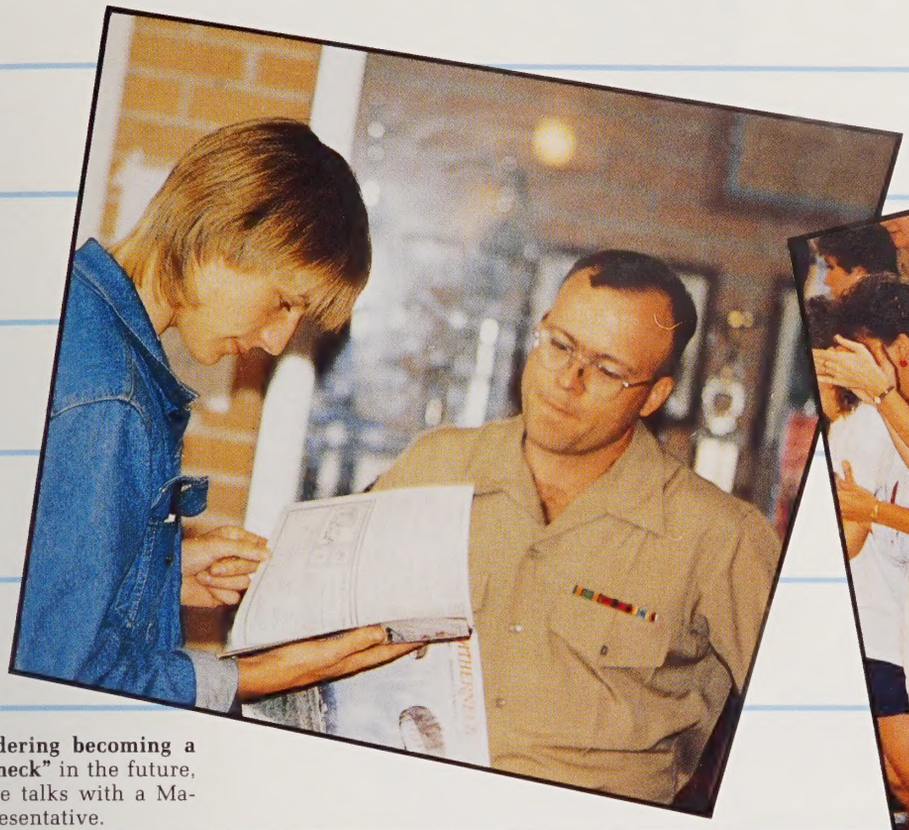
▲ Being a library aide isn't all work; Vanessa Higgins manages to find time to work on another subject.

▲ Chris Causby demonstrates that it isn't impossible to find a laugh at West.



Considering becoming a Leatherneck" in the future, rett Rice talks with a Ma-ne representative.

▲ The first pep rally of the year gives seniors Jennifer Cox, Beth Hudgins and Angie Rutledge an opportunity to show their Falcon spirit.

TIME Prime

The alarm clock screamed out "good morning" and was suddenly silenced by the smash of a hand. The realization finally hit . . . it was morning.

For most West Henderson students, this was the way their mornings began. The struggle to regain consciousness was virtually impossible, especially on Mondays when recovering from that weekend. Falcons may not have looked or felt their "Prime" in the mornings, but they usually managed to pull things together.

◀ A landing strip at West Henderson? Not exactly . . . only a news station dropping off a reporter for a football game.

◀ Eating crackers every day for lunch may not be very nutritious, but Wesley Russell prefers it over a lunch tray.

TIME Prime

The stereo is blasting the second verse of Bon Jovi's "Living On A Prayer", an open bad of chips and half-drunk can of Coke are on the floor, and a Laverne and Shirley rerun flashes wildly in the background. No, this is not a wild party. It's study time.

Such study habits are common among high school students, including those at West Henderson. Some may not consider this "Prime Time", but such scenes are what high school days are made of. Parents may feel a quiet table is more conducive for a well-organized study time, but . . . we all know better.

▶ Sharing some time together at lunch, Alease Rivenbark and Ron Stanley take advantage of the shade in the Senior Circle.

The Prime Time In

STUDENT LIFE

Where exactly did student life begin? Student Life began through the ability to dream. As Falcons knew, nothing was impossible. No matter what the proud Falcons were wearing, doing, or saying, they knew the spotlight was on them.

The students decided the '87-'88 school year was going to be the best ever! Falcons were determined to step up with the times and prove, "when the going gets tough, the tough get going."

Working hard to show that as a Falcon, "Every day is a good day", the students strove to do the best possible in everything they did.

Realizing that life begins through the achieving of goals, the pride in the Falcons showed that the high school years were "Prime Time."

◀ Lending a helping hand, Irene Diaz receives help from Mark Davis as she attempts to open her locker.

▼ The gossiping never ends as Mindy Riddle and Terri Gruca reach into their lockers.

▲ Gene Blodgett and Karin Franklin display that Falcon Spirit is limitless as they cheer the football team to yet another victory.

Graduation

The Class of '87 knew their time had come as graduation day arrived. Filled with anxiety, nervousness and a lot of hope, they reached to receive their long awaited diplomas. Not only would they be reaching for their diplomas, but to futures of new possibilities and dreams.

Many would be off to pursue their career dreams at the many colleges and universities. And those who decided not to follow the college route headed into their new lives starting jobs or joining a branch of the armed forces. Their choices were different, but they reflected on accomplishing and achieving their many goals.

Memories of their school days would never die. Friends, parties, dances, and football games would last in memory as they knew they would always be Falcons.

As the diplomas were handed out, the graduating Class of '87 knew it was time to step into their new world and meet the future!

Prom

Full of fun, surprises and romantic intrigue, it was a prom-perfect evening from beginning to end. Sharing a feeling of fantasy, no one would forget this night. It seemed that the magic of the moment would never end.

The preparations had seemed endless for the 1987 prom, as the juniors and seniors purchased their wardrobes and tickets. They decided to enter the prom mania and add a touch of sophistication to their lives. The ladies were elegantly dressed in their evening gowns, while the gentlemen's attire was debonaire. They worked continuously to make their looks perfect to the last detail.

As they entered the traditional area of Deerpark, the fun was beginning . The Falcons were eager to join the dancing and socializing.

Not only was this a night for fun, but for the seniors it would be a time for sharing and adding to their memories.

The atmosphere seemed placid as everyone danced the night away. Swaying to the beat of the romantic songs, the juniors and seniors knew that it was a time for dreaming. The festivities seemed to be only a fairytale as they eventually had to come to an end, but it was a point where some memories flourished and new ones began.

Summer of '87

Don't use the next section year so much in your book

Sunshine, sand, water, and waves were on many students' minds as they headed for life at the beach. As they started the summer of 1987, they relaxed with times of lounging, tanning and surfing. "Let's Party" sounded as the days of fun in the sun began. Multi-colored jams and surfers filled the beaches as everyone worked on back-to-school tans.

The beaches weren't the only big hit of the summer. Nick Ronningen said, "Visiting California was something I won't forget." If you were one who didn't reach the beach, you relaxed by the lake, were seen at the biggest parties, or as senior Brooke Cole thought, "Just sleeping late is always a benefit."

The record high temperatures soared as everyone tried to beat the heat. Fans, water and lemonade were popular methods of cooling down, but as everyone sweated it out, having fun was always a prime motive.

Whatever choice was made, everyone agreed that "Time flew when you were having fun!"

▶ Simon Isanhart experiences fun in the sun at the ever popular beach.

Back to School

Monday, August 24, 1987 was not just another ordinary day. It was the first day of school: the end of sleeping late, lying in the sun, and watching those ever popular soaps.

This year brought some surprising changes. Students had to face the fact that they could only miss fifteen days of school the whole year! Missing more than fifteen days meant having to go to summer school or repeating that class another year. This was hard to adjust to, but students such as Becky Lott felt that, "It will help keep students from skipping school."

In addition, students had to get used to going to homeroom after third period. This meant that being late for school meant being late for first period, and three tardies equalled one absence. Christy Cheek stated, "Homeroom was always better in the morning because you could study for the upcoming tests that you had that day."

A major problem all students faced was the fact that there were nearly 900 students at school this year. "The halls are just too crowded," exclaimed Larry Justice, But by Friday, everyone was ready to get into the swing of things. That afternoon everyone showed Falcon spirit by helping the cheerleaders make the first pep rally a roaring send-off for the year. Students were even more excited that night after the revenge game against Hendersonville ended with the Falcons on top!

The West Henderson Falcons were ready for a year of really "Prime Time."

Spirit of Homecoming

Homecoming has always been tradition-filled at West Henderson, and this year was no exception. The focus was on Friday when alumni would return to join students, parents, faculty and fans to cheer on the Falcons and share in the excitement of crowning yet another Homecoming queen. However, the festivities actually began the first of the week.

The ever-popular powder-puff game came back into play this year with, of course, the seniors standing on top. Then, a bonfire rally was held on Thursday night to get everyone fired up for The Big Night.

The first half of the game ended, and as the mighty Falcons trudged back into the Field House, a different excitement began to take over. When all of the members of the court and their escorts had stepped onto the field and had been introduced, the whole stadium became quiet. Finally, cutting through the silence, the announcer's voice came over the loud speaker. The 1987 Homecoming Queen is Miss Deanna Beecher.

After half-time, the fired-up Falcons, eager to keep the fans cheering, ran back onto the field ready to finish off the T.C. Roberson Rams. The last seconds on the clock ticked away, and the game ended with a score of 6-0. Another Falcon victory!

But this unforgettable night was not over yet, as students and alumni celebrated at the Homecoming Dance. As the night ended, the Falcons knew that the "Spirit of Homecoming" would never be forgotten; it would always live at West.

Looking at Fashion

▶ Seniors Becky Bringewatt and Tina Gragg capture the carefree appeal of the outdoors in the newest denim styles.

▼ Creating a fashion statement, Jon Carson makes heads turn.

Whether it was comfort, mood or style that influenced our dress, fashion always played an important role. We turned back the pages of time, and old fads came back as the most popular styles of the year.

Denim made a strong comeback. Acid-washed purses, shirts, jeans, jackets and even shoes seemed to be the rage on campus. The "variety of colors and styles" was popular with sophomore Kelly Thelen as she decided that most of the popular clothing was versatile.

If you were one of the people who paid attention to fashion headlines, you were definitely wearing lots of silver jewelry and hair bows or boots and everyone's favorite party animal — Spuds Mackenzie "partywear."

As each student's wardrobe was uniquely planned, sophomore Tina Brevard believed that "comfort comes before fashion." In the days of our generation, sweats could be fashionable, whether they were filled with holes or dyed different colors, "and whatever is cleanest in the closet" is the method junior Jeanne Otzelburger used.

The decisions were different, but the methods and ideas were similar. As the looks were updated year after year, each individual realized that fashion would always play an important role.

SHARING the Spirit

3rd Graphic change in Section

The Falcons knew it was "Prime Time" to show everyone you can't take the pride out of a Falcon. True spirit dazzled in all aspects whether it involved athletics, academics, or their own personal lives.

The colors blue and white had strong significance in every Falcon's life. As a symbol of dedication, loyalty, and enthusiasm, West students wore them proudly. As sophomore Melanie Tolbert commented, "The school colors help boost the Falcons' spirit and make them work harder for a victory." The ever-present and contagious Falcon spirit could be seen from the banners hung freely in the hallways to the vivacious student body at the many sporting events. "It's a way to show you care about the school's activities," said Daniel Thornton.

Throughout their many activities, West students always strived to be the best they could be. As a team the student body showed how to get into the spirit by participating in pep-rallies, bonfires and parades.

Whether it was by sitting in the pep-section or just cheering on their team, Falcons always added to the excitement. "You can always find spirit in everything we do at West," stated Patti London.

NIGHTLIFE

Falcons sometimes found diversions on weeknights by attending various sporting events. Nightlife was also a time for students to be involved in the many extracurricular activities that took place.

As the last bell on Friday rang, students began the anxiously awaited weekend. They shared times of celebrating, partying, and "enjoying the freedom," as senior Julie Partin said. But exactly where did the good times roll?

Falcons might have danced the night away at a school-sponsored dance or might have gone to Pizza Hut, a favorite hangout. "Everyone seems to like the noise and commotion that goes on there," stated Jennifer Gilbert.

If you decided not to make the game, you might have decided to head into Hendersonville to shop, or just relax, catching the latest movie. But then again, a great party was the perfect place for party animals to meet and mingle.

Many students could be found working after hours to earn some extra bucks. Unfortunately for many Falcons, this meant that nightlife wasn't for hanging out with friends.

Nightlife meant many things, doing the necessary, but also a time for the fun things.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS

Christmas bells rang as the Falcons headed off for their two weeks of vacation. Their minds were filled with thoughts of visiting relatives, skiing, or just vacationing and a visit from everyone's favorite — Santa Claus. Many students agreed with Dickie Brock who commented, "Christmas was a fun time for everyone."

Making the most of their vacations, students took part in Christmas programs and the exchanging of gifts. Tracey Wood believed, "The holiday season is the perfect opportunity to visit friends and relatives and give gifts." Falcons knew how to get into the spirit of the Christmas season. Not only would they be celebrating the Christmas season but New Year's Eve also. Welcoming the New Year brought resolutions. "I hope this year to be a friend to everyone and help others in need," pledged Trent Younger.

Throughout the many activities taking place during the holiday season, only one thing could damper a Falcon's spirit. This would be the reality of having to return to school.

Spring FEVER

Even though the calendar said it was still the dead of winter, students anxiously awaited a seasonal change as Spring Fever affected everyone. Occasional days of warm weather and sunshine brought an appealing atmosphere. Daydreaming highlighted the change as students began thinking of the outdoors. Stephen Lyda stated, "I was all ready to go on spring vacation."

The Falcons realized the spring season meant the shedding of sweaters and overcoats. "Clothing which kept me warm can soon be forgotten," stated Christy Hyder. Spring would bring a new wardrobe of shorts, tank-tops, and short-sleeves. Most students agreed with Rachael Neves who commented, "I'm tired of all this cold weather."

The reasons varied as Falcons looked forward to the new season. Carefree enjoyment of the outdoors would soon become a reality.

If anyone had memories of snowy days and cabin fever they were soon replaced by counting the days until spring break, short-sleeves, shorts, cruising with the top down, and the beach.

PEOPLE

Experiencing a Prime Time . . .

Falcons were special people. Seniors, ruling with their seniority, were the elite. Juniors enjoyed their middle class ranking as a time to relax and be themselves, and the new, hopeful sophomores worked hard to adjust to high school life.

The prime faculty was a main reason West's supremacy shone through. Without them, Falcons would not have been who they were, and West wouldn't be what it is.

Falcons made this a prime year. The thoughtfulness, spirit, and uniqueness of each Falcon made West a special school, made us envied by the rest, and made it truly a Prime Time.

SENIORS

The Prime of '88

The time had come at last. The Class of '88 had finally arrived at the prime year of high school and all the wonderful times and privileges that came with being a senior. It was a time to have fun, be wild, and enjoy times with friends. Whether it was a football game or English class, seniors showed their spirit, pride, and energy. They excelled in both academics and sports, bringing many victories to the Falcons, and much pride to West Henderson.

Seniors had many things to look forward to. Privileges made times easier and more exciting for the upperclassmen, along with a senior trip, the prom and the anticipation of graduation.

"Senioritis" was a definite characteristic for the upperclassmen and was present everywhere. At pep rallies the seniors always showed the most spirit and were the rowdiest by far. They were proud of their accomplishments and were closely united. Respected by the sophomores and juniors, they definitely had a lot of class.

The senior class officers worked hard preparing for Homecoming, Powder Puff, and organizing fund-raisers.

For the seniors, their last year of high school proved to be one of fun, hard work, and times never to be forgotten — times that produced memories that would be held for the rest of their lives. The Class of '88 emerged from their senior year as mature, proud Falcons with a head full of the great times of a truly PRIME YEAR!!!

REACHING THE TOP

"I can't believe that I'm finally a senior!" was the familiar thought of the proud upperclassmen at the beginning of the '87-'88 school year. For the seniors it meant a number of mixed feelings, because it not only meant finishing high school, but starting out in a new world, having to be independent and mindful of many decisions that would have to be made. There were decisions such as which college to attend, or which armed force to enlist in, and for everyone, the long-term decision of what to be or do with the rest of their lives.

Several different emotions were present — those of happiness, pride in accomplishments, and even fear — fear of what lay ahead.

The ultimate goal of most students was to walk across the platform and be awarded their diplomas. Now that this goal has been reached, there is the question of the future and what lies ahead.

Senior Rick Allison explained why he loved being a senior. "I don't have much more high school left until I graduate, so I'm having fun until then."

Expensive . . . but worth it

Although in public schools education is free, seniors were faced with many necessary expenses. These included purchasing a diploma and with any luck, participating in the senior trip.

During the summer before their senior year, students had yearbook portraits taken which had to be paid for in advance. When school started, seniors began applying to colleges, many of which required up to $35 application fee. And even before applying to colleges, students had to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test which cost $12.

Senior Jimmy Darity said, "The school should pay for some senior expenses such as diplomas and caps and gowns."

In trying to reduce senior expenses, Jeff Smith suggested that "the school should buy caps and gowns to lend them out to graduating seniors."

According to Mrs. Linda Graham, head senior sponsor, there are several reasons why the school can not provide caps and gowns. First, the school has no money for this purpose, and as for rental gowns, they are used by many schools over and over. They become perspiration-stained, get cigarette burns in them, and many are never returned. Storage would be a problem, as would the cleaning and folding. Rental fees are approximately the same as the purchase price, and with the ones that are used now, each senior has his or her own fresh gown — all in the same shade of blue.

Students agreed that it was expensive to be a senior, but considered it definitely worth it.

SENIOR SPIRIT

Anywhere you were it was present. In the hallways, at ballgames, at lunch, wherever you were the spirit of the Class of '88 shone.

Remember at the football games, in the pep section, all the wild and crazy seniors, screaming, yelling and getting the whole crowd into the game? Many times the cheerleaders would stand back and let them choose the cheers and then cheer along.

Or at lunch when a brave sophomore or junior would speak up and find themselves the victims of a pile-on with as many as 15 to 20 senior guys on top of them?

At pep rallies, seniors' spirit was most seen. Chanting their prideful title, "Seniors! Seniors! Seniors!," while the underclassmen dreamed about filling the same shoes in a year or two.

Seniors found many ways to show their spirit. Many joined athletic teams, the cheering squad or the Pep Club while others joined academic teams or clubs.

However it was done, the Senior Class of '88 had pride in their school, and this spirit bonded seniors together, creating friendships which would last a lifetime.

Special Treatment

Good times and bad times came with becoming a senior. It was not all fun and games. However, seniors were entitled to certain "Senior Privileges" that underclassmen wouldn't dream of having.

Parking was the major privilege whether it was in the senior lot or on the hill. Whenever an underclassman dared to park on "Senior Turf," they certainly suffered the consequences.

The senior dining room was a privilege because there they didn't have to lower themselves to communicating with juniors or sophomores and could eat in much less chaos than that in the cafeteria.

Or what about getting to leave school a whole two and a half minutes before the rest of the students? WOW!!!

Remember at the assemblies and pep rallies when the underclassmen had to stand up and honor the seniors when they walked in? This was probably the best senior privilege because it gave them a sense of accomplishment and superiority.

After all, as a senior, special privileges came with the territory.

It was difficult to find seniors who were impressed with these "extras." Many agree with Brian Pressley who said, "Seniors being upperclassmen are not given enough privileges."

Saying Goodbye

For seniors, the last year of high school was a time for being with friends, picking out a college, or making other plans. For some, it meant planning that spring trip to the beach — maybe the last time some friends would be together. It was a fun year, but unfortunately, leaving high school also meant leaving good friends and good times. It was a time to say goodbye to the familiar and look forward to the future.

Many friendships between seniors were established in elementary school or even before, and seniors found the thought of leaving life-long friends hard.

One senior, Zee Weaver, optimistically said, "I'm really going to miss my friends, but I feel I'll make new friends in college."

Vanessa Higgins, another senior, had the typical response. "Leaving high school, I think I'm going to miss my friends a lot."

There were a few lucky seniors who knew they would continue to see their old friends. Kevin Rutter said, "I won't miss my friends because we are all going to the same college."

Seniors such as Doug Nesbitt agreed that friends would be missed. "Sure, I'll miss my friends, but there will always be new friends, new memories, and a lot of good times to come."

Seniors Had Seniority

Seniors . . . the prime of '88 had seniority. They had special qualities that distinguished them from all the rest and made them what they were. Any senior would have claimed that . . .

•Seniors had authority•
Underclassmen quaked at the thought of them. When seniors talked, underclassmen listened; they even dodged them in the halls. But were seniors really as tough as they seemed? Naw . . . if you were nice to them, they were probably nice to you.

•Seniors had respect•
All eyes looked up to the seniors. They were the role models, the oldest and most experienced. From the seniors, underclassmen imitated and learned as they hoped someday to have that same respect.

•Seniors were close•
They stuck together through thick and thin. And friends they had are friends for keeps.

•Seniors were mature•
There were times when seniors had to become adult enough to tough out problems and seriously contemplate their futures. Although seniors could be crazy at times, they were also known for the values in which they believed.

•Seniors were energetic•
No one displayed more energy, spunk, and spirit than the seniors. When did they let it off? At all times of course, sometimes to the utter dismay of their teachers. But should seniors really be any other way?

•Seniors were privileged•
Seniors were seniors because of their privileges, such as special parking on "the hill", the senior circle and dining room, and the senior bell. These were all things that made the last year of high school a little more exciting for the seniors.

•Seniors were friendly•
No, seniors were not as awful as you might have first believed. You soon saw that as seniors put forth the effort to be friendly and make new friends. So if a senior ever smiled at you in the hall, you should not have assumed that they were up to something malicious — you just encountered the friendly side of a senior.

•Seniors were fun-loving•
Sudden outbursts of laughter, water-balloon fights in the courtyard, and wild parties were usually associated with seniors. Seniors had fun with anything they did, including schoolwork, but teachers could tell you that the two didn't always mix.

•Seniors were proud•
Seniors were always proud of what they were and what they represented. Being Falcons meant doing everything to the best of their ability, and seniors showed pride in West at all times.

•Seniors had spirit•
No matter what event, sports or otherwise, seniors showed spirit. They cheered and waved pom poms at the games so everyone would be reminded that Falcons are Number One. Seniors also showed spirit on the playing courts and in the classrooms.

•Seniors were superior•
Last but not least, seniors were superior. This was evident in everything they did. The class of '88 were prime, superior seniors.

Foreign Friends

This year West Henderson was privileged to be the host school of several students from foreign countries. Right away they began making friends and adapted well to the American high school atmosphere. However, attending American schools for them was quite different from back home.

Hiromi Miyasaki explained how (in Japan) things were very different. "Every week, our schedule is different so we don't get so bored with the same classes at the same time." In Japan, drivers' licenses cannot be obtained until the age of 18, so Hiromi explained that, "Most kids ride bicycles to school or arrive by bus or even by train."

Thanks to the faculty and students at West Henderson, these foreigners were able to make many friends quickly. "The people here at West have been really nice to me since I came. They invited me to their houses, parties and football games. I've really made many good friends who have helped me speak English better. I will be sad to leave everyone," said Maria Tejera.

JUNIORS

A Happy Medium

The Junior year was a time to consider many things. There were class rings to be ordered, PSAT's to take, and it was time to be thinking about a college or technical school to attend in the future.

Throughout the year, juniors kept busy with many activities. There was the annual magazine sale to pay for the prom and a new Pepsi machine to raise money for the junior class. Junior officers were also responsible for planning the prom.

One junior, Valerie Hendricks said, "I like being old enough to push the sophomores around and to stand up to the seniors." Another junior, Adam Fox, said, "I like being a junior because it means there's only one year left until graduation." Junior Becky Miles said, "I like being a junior because I don't have to worry about which college I'll go to, at least not this year. I feel secure right now. I am anxious to be a senior though, because it will be fun, and I'll finally get to graduate."

Juniors in general felt that being the "middle man" was great and was a time to relax. It was the happy medium between the worries of being a new sophomore and the anticipation of becoming a senior.

Though the juniors kept busy with all their activities and schoolwork, they were never too busy to have fun. Weekends were spent at the mall, the movies, parties, and of course Falcon sports events. Juniors made the most of their "middle year".

FAVORITE FLICKS

All the juniors surveyed had a favorite movie, one that made them laugh or cry, one they just had to see eight times at the theater, the one they still had to buy on video-tape. The survey asked for their all-time favorite movie and their favorite recent movie.

Coming in first place was the popular Dirty Dancing, a musical love story set in the 1960's starring Patrick Swayze and Jennifer Grey. Its impact really hit with its moving choreography and music that inspired dancing in the aisles. The fact that it was partly filmed in the Lake Lure area may have added to its popularity.

Not too far behind, in second place, came last year's hit Top Gun, an adventure-love story, about the best pilots in the country. Top Gun starring Tom Cruise and Kelly McGillis, was voted as the all-time favorite movie, and Dirty Dancing was voted favorite recent movie.

A little farther behind, in third place, came Fatal Attraction. This recent film, about an extramarital affair gone haywire starred Michael Douglas and Glenn Close. The spine-tingling suspense kept viewers on the edges of their seats, and after this thriller, it was unlikely that anyone would even think of having an affair.

In a close fourth came Running Man, another recently released movie which starred Arnold Schwarzenegger and game show host Richard Dawson. This movie was about a real life game show set in the year 2000. Coming in fifth was Nightmare on Elm Street III: Dream Warriors starring everyone's favorite lunatic, Freddy Kruger. This movie, released about a year ago, was the gory continuation to Nightmare on Elm street I and II. The horror continued as we cheered Freddy on in his successful third film.

Other movies voted for in the survey were Like Father Like Son, Lethal Weapon, Raw Deal, and Platoon.

HOT HITS

A favorite song? There are so many songs out today that it's hard to even imagine which to like best. But juniors toughed it out and voted in a survey for their all-time favorite song and favorite recent song. Their choice was "I Had the Time of My Life," a duet by Bill Medley and Jennifer Warnes from the movie Dirty Dancing. In a close second came "I Think We're Alone Now" by sixteen year old newcomer, Tiffany. The song is a remake of the original oldie by Tommy James and the Shondells, but with a new beat that gets everybody dancing. "I Think We're Alone Now" is the first release from the singer's debut album, Tiffany and has reached #1 on America's Top 40. In third was "Here I Go Again" by the rock group Whitesnake. Whitesnake also got most votes for the favorite group category. This old group came into popularity recently with the release of their new album, Whitesnake. Coming in fourth place was "U Got The Look" by the Prince of paisley himself, Prince. The song was from his album Sign O' the Times. "Honestly" by the Christian rock group Stryper, "Heaven is a Place on Earth" by ex-Go-Go Belinda Carlisle, and Whitesnake's "Still of the Night" were songs with a few votes each. One of the oldie songs named was "Old Time Rock 'n Roll" by Bob Seger. A few more of the oldies remembered were "In the Air Tonight" by Phil Collins, "Stairway to Heaven" by Led Zeppelin, the Eagles' "Hotel California" and "Louie, Louie".

SUPER SCOOPS

Everybody loves ice cream, and why not? There are so many flavors to choose from that there's got to be one for everybody's taste. But it hasn't always been that way. When your parents were young, there were a limited number of flavors to choose from. They didn't have Baskin Robbins' 31 flavors or T.C.B.Y. They relied on the Good Humor truck that came down the road, ringing its bell, or the drugstore's soda fountain in town.

Juniors counted themselves lucky with all the new and different flavors being created all the time, not to mention frozen yogurt, the lower calorie alternative to ice cream. For those who hated plain ice cream there were toppings and mixers such as Oreo cookies, chocolate bar pieces, fruit and candy to give it extra flair.

When asked their favorite ice cream flavors, juniors stuck to old favorites! In first place came good old fashioned chocolate, and in second place, chocolate chip mint. Vanilla came in third, and chocolate chip came in for a close fourth. Other favorites included cookies and cream, strawberry, rocky road, banana, cherry and peanut butter.

CLASS OF '89

Quotes CHOICES

The junior class was surveyed in several categories about their personal favorites.

By far the favorite choice in food was pizza. Pizza beat out the next favorite, seafood, by over one hundred votes.

Blue was the favorite color of most juniors, possibly because of our school colors. Another school color, red, came in second.

For a vacation most junio said they visit, or would like visit, the beaches. Favorit ranged from Myrtle Beach
Florida, but most said that a beach would do.

Although juniors did not a

Low Men On Campus

Being the youngest class in high school wasn't easy; any sophomore could have told you that. There was so much adjusting to new surroundings and new people. But, hey, there was a bright side; high school meant new opportunities, new acquaintances and more freedom and self-esteem. Sophomores agreed that West was a new experience and related their feelings about being sophomores. Tracey Wood said that the best thing about being a sophomore was "freedom and access to other guys." Liz Lombardi shared the same sentiment. "The best thing about being a sophomore is definitely the older guys."

Some sophomores, however, were not quite as pleased. Clint Crane failed to find any great satisfaction as a sophomore. "We don't get any privileges at all," he said.

There was good and bad to being a sophomore. There was the typical treatment from the upper classmen, along with thoughts that their day would come. There were freedoms and restrictions happy times and sad, but overall, sophomores seemed to be quite happy with their 10th grade year. Besides, it was made easier by looking at even better times ahead.

NEW FEARS BECAME

FEARS RESOLVED

For many sophomores their first day at West was filled with anticipation and fear. Being in a new school with new teachers struck fear in their minds. When asked what their worst fear on the first day was, most had similar replies involving the upperclassmen. As Kristie Lee said, "My worst fear was getting lost because of misleading directions from juniors and seniors." Christy Foyles agreed, but added, "I didn't want to be trampled by them."

Other fears included not getting a class schedule, or worse, having an incorrect schedule. Terri Gruca said, "I was afraid my closest friends and I would change, and we would go our separate ways. I guess I was afraid of not being accepted by other people."

As the year progressed, the sophomores' feeling of fear disappeared, and they felt they belonged at West.

Bumming Rides

After school every day the halls were filled with pleading sophomores trying to acquire a ride home. "I hate riding the bus home. It takes so long to get there, and all the noise drives me crazy," explained sophomore Teresa Stanley. When asked about riding the bus, most sophomores agreed with Teresa. "Most of the upperclassmen are nice and take me home. But after a while they start getting sick of it, and I'm stuck riding the bus home," stated sophomore Brandi Summey. The time will come when these sophomores will be juniors, and they will be the ones being asked for rides.

Adapting to Changes

Being a sophomore had its advantages and its disadvantages. It took time to adapt to the high school environment from the junior high. When asked what the biggest change was, Christy Cheek answered, "In junior high, during lunch you had to stay at your table. Here at West you're free to go anywhere on campus." Sophomore Susie Barton replied, "I like the freedom that you have here at West. It might not be a lot, but it's more than the junior high had to offer."

When asked what changes were for the worse, the same answer kept coming up. It seemed that most sophomores didn't like being piled on by the seniors during their lunch period, or being picked on and many other annoying things that came with being a sophomore. The sophomores took their share of criticism, but that came with the territory. When this year's sophomores are juniors and seniors, they will welcome the new sophomores with the same kind of treatment that they experienced. As the old saying goes, "What goes around comes around."

The freedom of driving was about the only thing that could get someone out of bed in time to be at school at 7:10 a.m. or keep them there until 4:00 p.m. every school day for 30 days. Seven classes a day was very tiring for those taking driver's education classes, but most agreed that it was worth it. Nancy West said, "It was definitely worth it. It meant that I was that much closer to being able to drive, legally. Being able to drive meant that I could be in a car without being a passenger."

Sophomores looked forward to drivers' education because it enabled them to get their permits and licenses. Then they could spend a little more time on their own or with their friends without their parents having to take them everywhere. Thoughts of actually sitting at the wheel helped them make it through those long hours at school.

◀ In the library, Kelly Thelen browses through a magazine while Kristie Lee uses this time to do some research.

Getting Involved

Sophomores, even though at a new school, seemed to be the first to become involved in the numerous activities West had to offer. They learned how things here were different from junior high. When asked what reasons they had for joining the various clubs, participating in sporting events etc., there were many different replies. "At West, since most of the club meetings are before or after school, you know that the members are there because they want to be. They make that special effort to be present, whereas at Rugby, kids just went to meetings to get out of homeroom," said sophomore Melanie Tolbert. "I started getting involved in clubs because, for one reason, it's a great way to meet new people, which makes a difference when there are so many unfamiliar faces," explained Faye Cartee.

This year, there was a great deal of sophomore spirit evident at ballgames and pep rallies. One of the "leaders" of this burst of school pride was Stan Kumor, who plainly stated, "Sophomores can have spirit too. Just wait till we're seniors!!"

Lynn Moore

Guidance Counselor

Students need a little counseling every now and then, especially seniors on their way to graduation and other students who were thinking about their future. But that wasn't all the guidance counselors at West Henderson did.

"It's nice to know that if you need someone to talk to you can go to the guidance office and get some help. Sometimes it's easier to talk to them than one of your closest friends," said Junior Amber Staley.

Mrs. Moore was always available in the guidance office ready to help any student with problems. These ranged from relationships with parents, to boyfriend-girlfriend situations, to peer pressure and academics. Mrs. Moore said that one of the best parts of counseling is helping students get scholarships.

West's other guidance counselor, Mr. Price, was always willing to lend a hand when students approached him with a problem. Mr. Price discussed personal problems as well as college applications with students.

Mrs. Blackwell, the guidance secretary mailed out transcripts and worked to get student records ready for microfilm. Mrs. Blackwell also worked on the computer, typed letters and requested student records.

ADMINISTRATION

New assistant principal Mrs. Kathy Revis, came to West from Erwin High School where she taught math. When asked what she enjoyed most about her new job she replied, "helping to solve a problem for a teacher or a student." Mrs. Revis said she missed teaching but likes West and has been made to feel welcome by the students. "I think it's nice that we finally have a woman . . . to relate to and shows us that administration is not just a man's job," explained junior Angie Dillard.

Mrs. Revis' duties go beyond student discipline. She is in charge of textbooks, curriculum, the exceptional child program, and helps with assemblies and evaluations.

Mrs. Revis got her undergraduate degree at UNC-Asheville. At Western Carolina University, she received a master's degree in math and her administrative certification.

FACULTY AND STAFF

FACULTY

They were the ones who influenced students, the guiding force that gave encouragement and direction. They came early and stayed late. Mr. Manis was on hand bright and early to welcome everyone and make sure all the buses arrived on time, and Mr. McBride stayed late assisting "young chemists" with their experiments and labs. Very seldom was Ms. Anderson seen without a stack of papers to grade, while Ms. Kiefer spent endless hours reading Major Papers.

Junior Marcie Bailey said, I really appreciate how the members of the faculty use their own time to sponsor a club or give extra help to a student in need."

Coach Parker and Coach Price were always around with the laughs, and Mrs. Koszarsky and Mrs. Robinson always had something unusual up their sleeves.

All the "little extras" from the faculty showed that they really did care.

Not to be taken for granted

Too many times students didn't stop to thank the custodians and cafeteria staff. Students took for granted that they would have a hot meal every day, and that someone would pick up the trash in the halls and courtyard.

"People talk about how they don't like the lunches here, but when you think about everything they offer us, then I don't see how you can't like it. We always have the choice between three and sometimes four different meals, with the two lines and the salad bar, and then we have the crackers and ice cream. I appreciate the hard work of the cafeteria staff," said sophomore Jennifer Clayton.

The custodians did an excellent job keeping the buildings in order. That was a big job when you think about how many students there were to clean up after. "I see Mrs. Stoll in the halls every afternoon sweeping or picking up paper. She's always working hard, and we should take time to thank her and the other custodians," said senior Corey Hunnicutt.

Time for a Change in . . .

ACADEMICS

Many times in the past, academics meant conforming to scholastic traditions, but this year was different. Both students and teachers enjoyed getting involved in their classes. Students applied lessons learned in class to extracurricular activities. This caused the nature trail to take a new turn. Creative students were able to devise technical, and sometimes humorous, projects, such as the video-taped English skits. Even when the approach was not new, studies were still tackled by students with enthusiasm. The student companies of some of the Applied Economics classes organized again and were challenging. This year was really Prime Time for academics.

TEACHING
on the run isn't easy

It's Monday morning and you're strolling down the hall of Z Building. All of a sudden a runaway cart rolls past you almost knocking you over. You do make it to class, but unfortunately you're late. Oh well, it's just one-third of an absence and a D-Hall. You look around for the teacher, but luckily she's not there. Just as you sit down, she comes rushing into the classroom, gasping for breath.

This may sound like fiction, but in the life of a "floating" teacher, it's reality. Floaters are teachers who don't have rooms of their own. Instead, they must use the rooms of other teachers who are on planning period. This year two of the math teachers were floaters, Mrs. Evelyn Ball and Mr. Steve Short. They both had mixed feelings about their situation, which they felt put them and their students at a disadvantage. Mr. Short said, "Floating is hard because I like to use an overhead projector, and not all the rooms have one." Mrs. Ball commented, "You can't always bring everything you need to the next class."

Mr. Short had good reason to dislike being a floater considering this was his first year at West. "It's hard to get organized when you move from room to room." On the other hand, Mrs. Ball discovered some good points about being a floater during the four years she has been one: "You don't have to worry about putting up bulletin boards and dealing with a homeroom."

Mr. Short and Mrs. Ball had good impressions of West this year. Mr. Short commented, "The students and teachers are more polite than I thought they'd be." And according to Mrs. Ball, "Everybody was super nice and well-behaved."

In spite of the disadvantages of being "homeless," both teachers said that they had enjoyed being at West.

READING

is not just an assignment

You probably went to your bookshelf or to the library many times this past year to pick out a book. But before you checked it out or read it, did you consider what made you pick that particular book? Was it the title? the author? your teacher? These were some of the reason why kids around West Henderson High picked certain books to read.

Many English teachers had a scheduled reading time during which their students were to read. They also suggested or assigned books from a reading list. For this reason, many people only read books when it was a part of classwork. Angie Deckard said, "I read only assigned books, and I enjoy reading." Sometimes, though, people read books because of a catchy or interesting title. Kristie Lee enjoying reading If Life Is a Bowl of Cherries, Then What Am I Doing in the Pits? and laughed at Gross Jokes.

The author may have been the deciding factor for you. Heather Hultin liked Agatha Christie's mysteries. "Agatha Christie's novels are spellbinding and intriguing," she commented. Subject matter could have been what you were interested in. Simon Isanhart enjoyed James Bond "007" books. "They're adventurous!"

But romance books by far were the most popular books on campus, and they were not just read by girls either!

A lot of kids read just for the sake of reading. They simply loved to read. Denise Moore commented, "I don't have a favorite book; I love all books!"

HIKING -

A New Course at West?

When most people think about a nature walk, they are reminded of walking through a forest that is scattered with beautiful flowers and inhabited by cute little animals. They would never think about . . . GETTING LOST! Or would they?

This year one of our biology classes went out on the nature trail. However, they did not make it back to class as easily as expected. This class got lost! The teacher, whose name shall not be mentioned, had made the mistakes of not knowing which way to go and losing track of time.

As one of the students explained in a confidential interview, the whole experience was truly ironic. "When we walked out of the woods and into someone's backyard, I knew we were lost. The teacher almost died there on the spot, but then he/she got hold of himself/herself and found someone that was home so we could call back to school and tell them what had happened."

There was only one problem with getting lost. The class got back in the middle of the next period. Although the teacher was upset, the students weren't exactly crying over the situation. When two students were asked about being late to class, their answers were, "Good, no typing," and "All right!!"

In spite of everything that happened, the teacher was still able to laugh about the whole thing. That was good because we thought it was funny, too!

Student Companies

We're in the Money!

This year several of the government/economics classes created student companies. These companies, just like the companies that make up the business world, planned, manufactured, and sold a product. One company produced video cassette racks. This product was unanimously agreed upon by the company's board.

The company project was part of the Applied Economics classes, whose program is sponsored by Junior Achievement. When asked why she thought the student company was helpful in learning, Dyan Zumstein, president of her student company commented, "I think this assignment helps people understand the working world and prepares them for a real job. It also helps by illustrating techniques of an assembly line and giving insight in how to sell."

Most participants enjoyed running their own companies. "I'm all for it!" said Wade Hall. "We get to make some money." Jeff Brovet explained, "It shows that manufacturing and selling the product are more difficult than they seem."

As to the success of the student companies, there were many possibilities. "It really depends on how motivated the students are about selling the product," commented Dyan. However, Fran Forbes said, "I figure we won't go under, but we won't make an enormous profit."

This business venture provided the students with experience and knowledge that must be acquired in order to run a successful business.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

How difficult are they?

After mastering the English language, students at West Henderson had the opportunity to learn a second language — French or Spanish. There were some conflicting opinions concerning the difficulty of the two, but there always seemed to be some general conclusions which could be agreed on.

Spanish was thought to be the easier of the two languages to learn. As Carolyn Whiteside commented, "It's easy! The only hard part is memorizing the vocabulary words." Denise Moore said, "Spanish is too easy to be difficult."

French, on the other hand, was considered a great deal harder to comprehend. There were more things to learn in order to gain the full concept of the language. Chris Phillips noted, "French is hard. The hardest thing is the grammar with all the rules." Shane Messer said, "French is very detailed. There's a lot you've got to remember before you can even say a sentence."

But all in all, students said they were glad to be learning a second language, no matter how difficult the process. As Mindy Riddle commented, "I'm just excited to be learning a new language so that maybe I can use it later on in my life."

Yearbook & Newspaper

Behind the Scenes!

Most people are not aware of many things that go on behind the scenes of West Henderson's two journalism classes which turn out the school newspaper and yearbook.

Being in these classes required accepting much responsibility. As Tommy Jones, Editor-in-Chief of Westwind explained, "You have to take it upon yourself to work. I like the responsibility." Editor-in-Chief of Wingspan, Darby Abbott, commented, "I am reponsible for writing clear, concise, and factual stories. Getting the right information is a must."

After new journalism skills were learned and old ones improved, a feeling of pride prevailed.

As Darby said, "Knowing that people depend on me to do my job gives me a great sense of satisfaction." Tommy agreed by saying, "I get a feeling of satisfaction from completing the job and helping others do good work."

If satisfaction and responsibility were not what attracted students to these classes, then what did? "In this class you don't go in, get an assignment, and listen to the teacher lecture," commented Tommy. But Darby's reason differed. "To be honest, I got involved in journalism because I thought it would help me in English."

Whatever the reasons were, the long hours of hard work paid off with a great sense of accomplishment.

TYPING

The Keys to Success

What was the course at West that was taken because its skill could be used in virtually any occupation? The subject was typing. It involved no studying and no homework, yet it could still be applied to many areas of a student's life.

Even if the students did not find any immediate use for typing, it could be used later. "I'm not sure exactly what area I will use typing in, but it will be a useful tool in any career," commented Jennifer Clayton. Chris Ledford said, "The reason I took typing is because I figured it would help me later in a business career."

Others took the course for a more immediate use. They planned to use their typing skills in college. "There will be many papers I'll have to write in college and even for the rest of my high school years. Typing will get them done faster," commented Paige Price.

Because so many students felt that typing would be valuable but could not work it into their schedules, a before-school class was added. According to Ross Lyons, "I needed one vocational course for the NC Scholars Program, and the only way I could fit it in without dropping another class was to take it in the morning."

Students who voluntarily added a seventh course to overloaded schedules, felt that it was worth the sacrifice.

CHILDCARE

For the Young at Heart

Each morning after all of the classes were settled in their rooms, the great masses of people had disappeared from the halls, and everything was peaceful. All of a sudden, the silence was broken by shouts and squeals of children saying, "Give it back!" and "Let's play house!"

These children came to West every day to be played with, read to and taken care of by students in the childcare class.

The children who attended each day were greatly influenced by the West students. "We try to teach them the days of the week and let them set the table to help develop their skills of learning to count and follow a pattern," explained Tammy McMahon. Julie Johnson commented, "We try to do learning activities that will help them while they are so young and vulnerable."

Being in this class involved the full time concentration and undivided attention of each student. This class involved a lot of work, but all agreed it was well worth the time put into it.

NEW ADDITIONS

For a More Permanent Look

Remember the dilapidated benches that used to be all over the campus? This year those old, wooden benches were uprooted, and 25 to 30 new and improved cement ones were permanently installed by one of the vocational classes.

Mr. Hollifield, teacher of the masonry class, and Dr. Flynn agreed on a style similar to TC Roberson's benches. After that, construction began with the pouring of cement into the ground. Then after the cement dried, the blocks were laid, and pretty soon the benches were built. All the work was done by students in the masonry classes.

Mr. Hollifield had a creative idea for the new benches. "I wish the student body would get involved with this project. It would look nice if the clubs would paint them. It would also make them smoother."

But the benches were not the only things the masonry class has contributed over the years. They helped in the building of the press box, the field house, the ticket booth, and other buildings on campus.

SPORTS

West Henderson sports exemplified what true Falcon Pride was all about. The players and the fans alike felt the challenge of competition, confidence of play, and the thrill of victory. With the crowd always supporting them, the athletes portrayed prime qualities of the characteristics of true sportsmanship. West Henderson athletes learned that through it all they could be the best, not just by winning, but by working together. Throughout every season the athletes proved themselves not just the most dedicated, but the best-all-around. So when the seasons were over, they could look back on the victories, even the heartbreaks, and remember that through it all, they had a Prime Time.

Where It All Starts

It was Friday night, lights were on, food was everywhere, and screaming fans were just waiting to cheer their team on to victory. But where did this excitement start? Coaching. Coaching played a tremendous part in how well the team performed.

As part of the football program, the coaches had to develop good coach/player relationships.

Coach McDowell felt that it was important to "establish good lines of communication, so we can reach our goals." And the coaches set very high goals for the team this year such as winning the WAC title and the state championship.

Although most coaches had their own techniques for winning the state championship, some learned from former coaches. When Coach Robinson was in high school, he found that "Coach Wright and Coach Paul Stanley believed discipline, hard work and dedication were necessary to be an outstanding team."

Perhaps the greatest reward coaches got from coaching was "seeing players become young men and successful in life. And when a team can overcome adversity by hanging tough and not giving in, it just makes my job seem all the more worthwhile," said Coach Wright.

When the game was over, the coaches could go home with a sense of pride because of what they had accomplished.

A Day In the Life

As the bell rang on Friday at three o'clock, most students breathed a sigh of relief that the week was finally over. But to the members of the Varsity football team, their day had just begun.

At three o'clock, the team headed to the cafeteria for the pre-game meal, which usually consisted of waffles, eggs, and fruit. John Thorsland explained the reason. "This gives you energy and other foods set heavy in your stomach." After the meal was completed, the team loaded the bus to go to church. After a brief devotion and prayer, it was back to school for a few hours of rest. The team called this "intense mental preparation." When asked how he felt during this time, Brian Pressley said, "No one can sit still." Todd Murphy added, "Everyone is on edge." After resting, the guys broke into groups and received a summary of assignments for the game. Then it was off to the field for pre-game warm up.

Most of the team felt that being together made them feel like a family. It made the spirit stronger and brought the team together.

As the lights of the stadium went out, memories of the day's events passed through the players' minds. Finally, the day was over, and the game had been won.

A Learning Experience

When any football player was asked what he learned from playing football, most felt the same as Brian McMinn did when he stated, "Discipline, how to work as a team and how to handle pressure."

Possibly the person with the most pressure on him would have been the quarterback. When asked about this pressure Jason Stanley replied, "I'm under severe pressure being a quarterback. I get it from everybody. If we lose, they don't say the team didn't play well, they blame me; but if we win, I don't get any credit, I'm just out there. But it's the greatest position in the world."

When asked what was the most important lesson he has learned from football, Rodney Bullock stated. "Coach Wright told us if we learned anything from what he's taught us, he wants us to be a winner in life."

Overcoming the Odds

The qualities that kept this year's J.V. football team on the move were teamwork, the players' respect for their coaches, and the coaches' dedication to developing a good team.

These three qualities always encouraged the team to do their best. As sophomore Bobby Stepp stated, "Teamwork unified the players, so we were able to overcome the obstacles in our path."

In spite of obstacles such as the team's limited experience, the J.V. coaches never stopped trying to improve the team, and the players never let up on their efforts. According to Coach Parker, "The J.V. team worked hard and did a good job performing both on and off the field."

A Bright Future

Soccer (sak'er) n. — A game played with a round ball by two teams of eleven players on a field with a goal at either end; the ball is moved by kicking or hitting it with any part of the body except the hands and arms.

Two years ago, the sport known to Americans as soccer was unheard of at West High. Many new sophomores who played soccer at Rugby were disappointed when they arrived on the hill and found no soccer team here to greet them. But all of this changed in the fall of 1986. For the first time, the name "Falcon" was given to a soccer team. The fall of 1987 marked the second year at West for this team, and being a second year team had many advantages. "In your second year, you're used to working and practicing as a team; therefore, you can perform better on the field," stated captain Ross Lyons.

Even as the second season was coming to a close, the future of the Falcon soccer team was bright. Next year's team will have a brand new field to play on. The team of 1988 will also have the experience of a third season to help guide them into a winning year.

A Winning Tradition

Winning was a tradition at West especially when it came to volleyball. For the past ten out of thirteen years the volleyball team has won the conference title and many other important matches. How did they keep such a good record? When asked, Coach Jan Stanley replied, "I feel that we stick to the basics and try not to complicate things a lot. Volleyball is a mind game, and we try to keep the girls ready by their minds." The Lady Falcons were excited about playing on a winning team, and it was very important to do their best and win. They had the talent, so all they had to do was play to the best of their ability. Coach Stanley stated, "We knew we had the experience, but we didn't know if we had that hustle, but they played to their ability."

Even though the odds were against this year's JV volleyball team, the Lady Falcons had a great season. They proved to have the determination to put all they had into every game. They were always ready to compete, because they wanted to be champions. As junior Phoebe Lawless stated, "All the dedication and hard work that went into practices really paid off during the games." But perhaps the biggest surprise was one Coach Jan Stanley noticed. "It usually takes the JV team half way through the season to develop a sense of play, but they picked it up really quick. They did a good job of working together, and these girls put all their Falcon pride into every game, and not once did they get down on themselves." Sophomore Christa Worley said it best when she added, "The team did well this year because we worked together, and that is what volleyball is all about."

Endurance = Success

Running on the Cross Country team took more than fancy running shoes. Each member ran three to four miles daily. So how did one get interested in this kind of sport? Debbi Gass said, "I started running on my own last April, and by this August I could run four miles. I figured since I had endurance, I wasn't going to let it go to waste." Debbi certainly did not let her endurance go to waste. She placed thirtieth out of one hundred runners at the State Championship Cross Country Meet in Charlotte in November. This was the first time any girl from West had gone to the state meet. Despite low placings for the season, this year's Cross Country team was the fastest in timings as compared to previous years.

Shooting the Lights Out

Basketball requires more than a knack for putting a ball into a net. It is a sport that requires being aggressive, in shape, and able to perform as a unit. As Coach Price stated, "The three categories we stressed this year were developing more intense control, being more aggressive on the court, and being in better condition than the other teams." This conditioning and control resulted in a very close-knit group with a lot of team spirit.

"As with any unit, a group can succeed with a little teamwork," senior Mike Worley commented.

The leadership of Coach Price and the good morale of the team members made the fact that there were only five returning seniors seem less of a handicap. Coach Price, impressed with his players, said, "I was the most excited that I've been about a basketball team since I left Highlands."

After a grueling but unsuccessful game, the Falcons show their good sportsmanship by congratulating the East Eagles.

After being fouled by an Eagle, Jay Roberts attempts to gain points by a foul shot.

Defense is the Key

The Varsity Boys' Basketball team proved to be one of the best defensive teams to come through West in quite a while. Coach Greg Price decided that this was the year to concentrate on defense. "If you have a strong defense, you will most likely have the power and strength to win," he commented.

Before every game Coach Price met with his players to get them mentally prepared for the stresses they would soon face while playing defense. This pressure was a constant battle which the team had to overcome. Senior Brian McMinn noted that, "the team performed better under pressure than they had in other years. If a game was on the line, no one would panic; we would work together, and we could come out on top."

Being able to control pressure like this allowed the team to do well as a defensive unit. But no matter how the games ended, as Coach Price stated, "These guys never got down on themselves. They kept pulling for each other."

Success

Success — one who succeeds; the obtaining of a desired goal.

What did it take for the JV Basketball team to be successful?

First and foremost, the team had to enjoy the sport. Clint Crane stated, "It's fun; I like it when the crowd is behind you, and the recognition you get."

Second, you have to have the right kind of players. Daniel Thornton commented, "You have to have size and speed. If you have big men on the inside, you can rebound well, and the speed allows you to run the floor well." The JV Falcons had exactly this. Charlie Fowler stated, "We've got a lot of tall people that rebound well, and we have a pretty good shooting team."

Coach Paul Bagwell stated, "We do a good job inside and with ball handling. We have some talented kids."

The JV basketball team worked well as a team because they knew they had what it took to be successful.

◀ With a great deal of ease, Clint Crane attempts a foul shot.

Stars of the Court

"We like to think of the team as a family. I think this brought us closer together and helped us play better as a team." This statement from senior Sherry Smith summed up the overall atmosphere that surrounded the Lady Falcon varsity basketball team. This "family" atmosphere led to a sense of respect and understanding among the team members, which allowed them to compete for excellence and become stars of the court. But how did the players develop such close relationships? Many team members, having returned for their second and third years, had already gained the understanding they needed to become like a family.

▶ Looking for an open player, Jennifer Clayton prepares to pass the basketball.

This experience also helped on the tactical end. "We had four experienced players which made the difference," Coach Stanley confirmed.

"We had good outside shooting, and we relied on the guards to move the ball around a lot," she added.

The Lady Falcons had it all this year — close ties and respect and the playing ability that made them true "stars of the court."

Inspiration

Many things contributed to the top notch sportsmanship of this year's Lady Falcon Basketball team, but one important factor was the inspiration that each member felt. They had high hopes of achieving every goal they had set for themselves. Senior Kelly Johnson commented, "We always try to do our best and never give up. We are most inspired by Coach Stanley because she never gives up on us." Coach Stanley gave most of the credit to the team members. "It all depends on how much the girls want it."

It didn't take long for the Lady Falcons to convince the fans that they had the inspiration to develop a strategy for a successful season. As Angie Meadows noted, "At practice, the team tries to help each other by playing one-on-one and using other techniques. When we do this for each other, it brings us closer, which gives us hope and inspires us to have a good season."

More Than Meets the Eye

Try to imagine three hour practices consisting of running, intense conditioning, learning fundamentals, then drilling on these fundamentals. What sport could require all of this? Definitely Falcon wrestling.

Why would anyone want to go through such exhausting workouts? Taylor Sullivan stated, "It builds your self-confidence, and you learn a lot about life. You learn that you're not always given the upper hand. I like to see if I can make it through the physical part of it, and I like the mental strategy of matches and practice."

There was more to wrestling than met the eye. The possible six minutes spent on the mat during a match were spent fighting for a pin. This was where all the practice paid off. This was the time a wrestler could prove to the coach and to himself that he had what it took to be successful.

Coach Darrell McDowell commented on this sport and his athletes. "Anyone who wants it bad enough can be a wrestler; you don't have to be six feet tall, and so on. You are not dependent on anyone else when you are out there. The glory or the defeat is all yours".

◀ With all of his strength, Troy Neil prepares to turn his opponent over and pin him.

Pep It Up

Cheerleading was a full-time sport and an important part of life at West. The squads worked constantly. These girls helped to boost the outlook of the teams while cheering them to victory. "The cheerleaders helped get the crowd more involved, which made it easier for the players to do what they do best — win." When you have people backing you up while you play, it makes everyone feel their true Falcon Pride. Their spirit was greatly appreciated by the fans and players alike," commented Daniel Thornton.

The enthusiasm of the cheerleaders was obvious to those on the sidelines. As their sponsor Mrs. Barbara Lemmons stated, "Both Varsity and JV cheerleading squads were made up of outstanding young ladies. Most were enthusiastic students who took pride in all their endeavors. They all went above and beyond what was asked of them as cheerleaders."

The cheerleaders brought life to every sports activity by bringing their spirited personalities with them during all school and non-school related activities. They practiced constantly trying to improve old techniques and creating new eye-catching formations. "Having a limited number of girls on the JV cheerleading squad allowed us to try new and more difficult stunts," stated JV cheerleader Stephanie Nesbitt.

Varisty cheerleader Christy Doggett commented, "It was a lot of hard work, but it all paid off when the Falcons captured another victory. I enjoyed being a part of Falcon athletics and supporting all the players who worked hard this year. I know Falcon Spirit will always remain in my heart."

Carrying On A Tradition

"1. Glorify God. 2. Perform as best as possible in every game. 3. Continue a class program at West Henderson." These were the most important hopes of the new baseball coach, Rusty Stroupe.

After the departure of Coach Rick Robinson, Rusty Stroupe stepped in as the new baseball coach, and brought with him his ideals to make a winning team. "This year there is a lot more hard work put in, and there is a lot more self control," as second-year player Mark Ramsey commented. Why did Coach Stroupe want to put so much effort in baseball? He explained his deep respect for the sport, "It's the dream game. Deep down all kids want to grow up to play baseball."

Catch the Action

The game known to Americans as softball originated in Chicago in 1887 as a type of indoor baseball. But the present-day game was developed in Minneapolis, Minnesota by Lewis Robert. Softball has seen many changes since then.

There are two types of softball, slow pitch, and fast pitch. With fast pitch there are nine players and with slow pitch there are ten. "This year the Lady Falcons played a slow pitch game, because the Association says that it will be used in high schools for two more years," commented Coach Watkins.

During a softball game, the ball is pitched underhanded, and there are usually seven innings. Although there is not a male softball team at West, there is a great demand for it. Softball is a popular sport for males and females.

"Tee Time"

At the rolling greens of the Etowah Valley Golf Course, the scent of freshly cut grass filled the air. For a moment there was silence. The golfer putted, and the golf ball slowly curved and rolled into the eighteenth hole. Cheers filled the air as the West Henderson Golf Team won another match.

For the golfers, every "tee time" was test time. There were a lot of pressures put on the golfers to see if they could keep their winning image up. It was not always easy, but the golf team always pulled through.

Kevin McCallister stated, "Even though it is an individual sport, it's a team sport too. It puts a lot of pressure on you when you're on the eighteenth hole and you have to make the putt to win."

Track is usually thought of as a team sport. However, when the runners were on the track, they were competing against themselves as well as their teammates.

Coach Price said, "Running is a sport that you can't push hard every day or you will eventually run down."

When the West track team started running, the coaches made sure there was a purpose behind every workout, either to work on speed or endurance.

"Love" Is In The Air

It was a warm spring day and the match was tied at deuce. The sun was beating down on the players, and the heat radiated from the paved court. This was often the case with the Falcon Tennis Team. The heat was always on, whether it was the sun or the pressure of the match. "Pressure continues until you make the point," commented Chris Ferrell. This pressure, coupled with the heat made the tennis matches grueling and sometimes unbearable, but the Falcons coped and made a good season of it.

Spending Prime Time In

ORGANIZATIONS

Organizations were many and varied this year with student participation being higher than ever. As a result of student involvement, these clubs grew larger and larger as the year went on, with activities getting better and better. FCA ended 1986-87 with a membership of ten students, but by the end of this year, averaged thirty to thirty-five people at each meeting. From the Nature Club and Student Council, to FHA and DECA, students were busy participating in various extra curricular activities such as fund raisers, school dances, and hayrides. Whether their meetings were before school, during school or after school, much Prime Time was spent involved in these groups.

That Was the Type

What type of person would have been expected to be in NHS or Student Council at West Henderson this year?

— It would have been someone who felt concern for their school and had the desire to do something for it. Student Council and NHS spent much time trying to get students and teachers involved through dances, assemblies and after-school activities. Wayne Busch, explained "We kept the students involved through the traveling Christmas tree and a drug-awareness assembly for all interested students."

— It would have been someone who didn't mind hard work. Repainting the Falcon on the hill, planting shrubbery, and working at car washes are a few examples of what they did. Members were willing to work because, "It shows the pride we have for our school," stated NHS president, Ross Lyons.

— It would have been someone whose grades could have been kept above average. NHS members were required to keep a 3.5 grade point average throughout the year and Student Council members a 3.2.

— It would have been someone who was willing to give time. Meetings were held during lunch and before and after school. It was worth missing lunch because, "Being a part of Student Council provides me with the chance to have some sort of say-so in the happenings of my school," commented Mindy Riddle.

— It would have been someone known as a good leader by their teachers and classmates. This was a qualification and continuing expectation for NHS members. Student Council officers and homeroom representatives were voted on by the student body.

Worth Losing Sleep Over

What was it about FCA that brought a group of half-awake students together at 7:30 every Wednesday morning? No, it wasn't their uncontrollable urge to get to school early. "The friendship and the time you have to socialize with other Christians," was Doug Searcy's explanation for being such an early riser. Devotions, done mostly by the students, seemed to be popular with the members. Dawn Packard felt, "It gets across to you better because it's a teenager talking to a teenager. Evidently it helped because as Doug Searcy stated, "This year we had 45 to 50 at our first two meetings."

SADD also increased in numbers this year. "I was surprised at our first meeting," stated Jenny Kumor, "and I didn't think that many people would come back to the second meeting, but we had more." To actually show results of drinking and driving, a car involved in an alcohol-related accident was placed on West High's campus for Homecoming.

Both FCA and SADD met in the mornings before school, but what came of their meetings was worth a lot more than extra sleep.

Key Ingredients

What attracted West High students to join Key Club, Keywanettes, and Interact?

MOTIVATION — Motivation was the desire to spend personal time, during and after school, participating in a club. The motivation for Taylor Sullivan to join Key Club was, "helping out people."

PARTICIPATION — There were many activities in which these clubs participated. All were directed toward helping others, whether by brightening the hours of patients in a nursing home, collecting food for a food drive, or simply stuffing the fence for the football games.

REWARDS — Rewards are often thought of as material things. But with these service organizations, this wasn't the case. Laura McWhorter said, "It kind of gives me a feeling of fulfillment because you get to appreciate what you do for them."

Motivation, participation, and rewards were just three "key" ingredients of the character of our students.

Rock With Class

Whether their preference was classical or rock music, the members of the String Ensemble and Jazz Band enjoyed pooling their talents to benefit others and for their own enjoyment. As Nicole Judkins said, "We're all like one big group or family."

Musicians in the Jazz Band, an elite group of band members, were determined to utilize their abilities beyond the Marching Band. As Shannon Perry stated, "It gave me the opportunity to play a bigger variety of music." Many of their performances were given at West Henderson and at various rest homes.

The String Ensemble also played at West and for several elementary schools. "I enjoyed playing for elementary schools better than high schools because they enjoyed it more," said Jennifer Boone. Jazz Band and String Ensemble musicians all worked hard to please others through their music.

◀ Working hard to improve a piece of music, the String Ensemble takes the challenge seriously.

◀ Concentrating on every beat is Tim Whitlock's main priority during Jazz Band practice.

Practice Makes Perfect

It had finally arrived — Friday night. All got quiet as the Flying Falcon Marching Band stepped onto the field. Once they were in place, the evidence of all their hard work began to show. "With pride, horns up!" was shouted by every member.

For the Flag Corps, practice began even before the '86-'87 school year had ended. They had to prepare themselves for the "Marching Auxiliary of America Camp." The many hours of work had its rewards according to Jenny Hollingsworth who stated, "We got a superior rating for our home routine."

Summer Band Camp, held at West Henderson, lasted three weeks. Sophomores had to come two weeks prior to that for "rookie camp." Kevin McCallister stated, "In those two weeks of 'rookie camp', I learned more than I did in three years of band."

Behind the Scenes

The curtain closed, and the roaring applause rang through the auditorium. The play was a success, and praise for the performance was heard throughout the audience. However, the audience only saw the product of many hours of rehearsal. To actually show all the time spent, Tim Justice gave a step by step explanation of what goes into a production. "First of all you have a director, and he usually chooses the play to do, or sometimes the Thespians do." The Thespians are the more experienced members of Actor's Ink, which is for anyone interested in theater. Next, Mr. Jones "holds auditions for anyone interested in the play. They come in and read from the script, and if he thinks you're good enough for the part, then usually you'll get it." Tim continued by saying, "Then we get our scripts and start learning our lines. Meanwhile Mr. Jones is building the set with help from the carpentry class. After we get all our lines learned, we start going through the technical aspects with the lights, the music, and all of our props. That's all about two weeks before the play, and then everything gets very fine-tuned."

The play was over, but more work lay ahead. The set had to be broken down and reusable parts put back in their place. Although it was a lot of work, Nick Ronningen stated, "It builds comradery between the actors. We act together, build the set together, and take the set apart together. This way the play is only as good as we make it."

In the Real World

For many students, getting through high school classes was hard enough, much less preparing for a career after graduation. For FFA, FBLA, and DECA students, working to prepare themselves for future careers was an everyday experience.

Most FFA members not only spent time in school learning about horticulture, carpentry and welding, but they also spent time after school at soil judging contests, dairy judgings and land surveys. FFA was important to Donald Mull because, "It teaches me how to be better at farming."

FBLA members also strived hard to prepare themselves for the business world. They participated in classroom activities such as typing, accounting, and shorthand, to aid them in their careers. They also worked together as a group to learn more about successful business techniques such as "preparing for an interview and participating in competitive events," according to Missy Parker.

FFA and FBLA were not the only groups that worked hard this year. DECA members found on-the-job training an important step toward a career. Most left half the day in order to go to work. "Mr. Housley will find you a job if you don't have one, or he will set up an interview for you," stated Wendy Fowler. The work-experience learned through DECA, FFA, and FBLA helped prepare these members for the real world.

Preparing for the Future

Could the average student —
— design the interior of his or her own house?
— take blood from a donor?
— run a daycare center?
— make an outfit?

Most would say "no" to these questions, but a member of FHA, HERO or HOSA would be able to do some or all of these things. But what good comes from knowing all this? How will it help in the future?

FHA member Sonya Norris replied, "It will help me after I get married," speaking of the food preparation, sewing and other homemaking skills obtained in FHA. Working toward their own future wasn't the only thing FHA members did. They helped other people in the county. One way they did this was by having a Christmas party for resource students at Mills River Elementary School.

HERO was another organization related to home economics, but their focus was on childcare. "They don't know what you mean unless you explain everything to them," remarked Joy Partin about the children in childcare. HERO also helped children and their parents become aware of the growing rate of child abuse in this country by supplying lectures for the parents and their children about child abuse.

Also planning for their future were the members of HOSA. This club was for students interested in a health-related career. They spent their time in and out of class working at the hospital, taking blood pressures and practicing CPR on dummies to help prepare them for a health career.

These students had plans for the future and were getting a head start on them.

The Great Outdoors

The great outdoors was where the skiers from West Henderson and the members of the Nature Club spent much of their time.

The Ski Club was a competitive group of students who met other schools at Cataloochee to race down the snowy trail. "They were responsible for buying their own equipment and paying for their own lift tickets," stated Mrs. Rose Koszarsky, chaperone. They competed in two different events, the slalom and the giant slalom. These courses had flags strategically placed so that skiers had to zigzag in and out between them.

The Nature Club was devoted to working on the nature trail. Their purpose was to make a nature trail behind West that would be available for teachers and students. The idea was to make a path which would demonstrate nature in its fullest and aid teachers in introducing students to the great outdoors.

However, for the Chess Club members, the outdoors was a place they saw only through the window when they could draw their attention away from their game. "Chess is a deeply involved game requiring a lot of skill and strategy," stated John Cunningham. Members met weekly purely for the love of chess and the opportunity to get together with other players for a game.

Showing their Cheer

Two groups responsible for leading West Henderson in song and cheer were the Advanced Chorus and Pep Club. They spent their time making our school look and sound its best.

Throughout the year, members of the Pep Club showed their enthusiastic pride by yelling for, screaming with, and participating in Falcon athletics. "The support at the football games was greater this year than any other year," stated Tracy Lyda. As a result, the Pep Club set aside a section in the stadium just for those students willing to cheer on the Falcons. The Pep Club not only sold ribbons, buttons, megaphones, and hats, but they also went out onto the field every home football game and released the colorful balloons that brightened the sky.

Advanced Chorus was also responsible for brightening up West. Through their voices in song, they touched many hearts. "When people saw us perform, they were impressed," said Terri Gruca, while Sally Wilson added, "They gave us a standing ovation!" The Advanced Chorus sang at the Christmas assembly, at nursing homes, and at concerts for the parents and the community.

Lingo

The desire to perfect one's own language or a foreign language may have led to becoming a member of either the Debate, Literary, or French Club. These clubs spent many afternoons learning, practicing, and perfecting a language while still having fun.

The Debate Club was new at West Henderson this year and was successful. Part of the success relates to the future of the members because as Karen Franklin said, "It gives you good communication skills and it also gives you a good reference for a major college." They met one Thursday out of the month in order to get together and discuss topics of debate.

The Literary Club was also new this year. Members spent their time "critiquing each other's work and working on a future literary magazine," said Marianna Dockery.

Although the French Club was not new this year, members spent much time learning more about the French language. Their meetings were held in French, they watched French movies, and they ate French cuisine.

More Than Meets The Eye

Publications are an important part of almost every high school. West Henderson had two publications: Wingspan, the newspaper, and Westwind, the yearbook. But why did they exist? Angie Barkley explained, "The yearbook is a valuable part of every school because it is the only book that can be kept for the rest of our lives to remind us of our high school days."

A lot of hard work was put out by the two staffs. Trying to squeeze a few more interviews into a half-hour lunch period, typing copy at home, and redoing work on the advice of a conscientious editor or adviser, were just a few examples of the tasks expected. So, why would anyone join? "I joined to get some hands-on experience with photography, since that's what I'm interested in. Being on the staff has helped me make a definite career decision," answered Mark Conner, a member of the Wingspan staff.

"Deadline" was a common word heard throughout both staffs and was reemphasized by the advisers. After the final yearbook deadlines had been met, everyone waited for the final product. According to Mrs. Stakias, yearbook adviser, "We wait in exhausted anticipation to see what our efforts have produced, and with crossed fingers until we know, once again, that 'They like it!' "

The journalism classes were always trying to improve their work. This year the newspaper staff acquired a Macintosh computer which made their work easier, yet more professional. And Kelly Thelen suggested, "It would be nice if the newspaper had a laser printer. It would save time, we could get more experience as newspaper staff members by using it, and it would save money."

◀ Complete concentration, as exhibited by Amber Wilkie, is needed for writing a newspaper article.

◀ With the help of Darby Abbott and Tommy Jones, Mrs. Gorsuch reinforces the purpose and privileges of being Quill & Scroll members.

Prime Responsibility in the COMMUNITY

The most important years of a student's life are the high school years. This is the time when responsibility starts being felt and acted on. Many West Henderson students felt they needed to start doing more and more things on their own. They had the chance to prove to the community that they could make something worthwhile of themselves. To do this, many students took on the responsibility of paying jobs or volunteer work. They set a prime example throughout the community at a variety of places such as grocery stores, fast food restaurants, fire departments, and nursing homes. This involvement benefited the community as well as the students.

A Growing Community

Every year more and more businesses are being started, are expanding, or are moving into the community.

Recent years have seen the development of Village Square, Blue Ridge Mall, Four Seasons Cinema, and Laurel Park Shopping Village. Pisgah View Plaza and the Bar-B-Q-Shak, both in Etowah, have been great additions to the west side of Henderson County and are equally convenient to the people of Hendersonville and Brevard.

Walmart, a leading national discount chain, made plans to open a store in Hendersonville. The site, which will include Henderson County's fifth Ingle's Supermarket, took shape at a convenient location just off Four Seasons Boulevard at the I-26 interchange.

The opening of new businesses and the growth of others meant more job opportunities.

Adding style to the community, the First Federal Bank Building rises high above Hendersonville.

The new Wachovia Bank provides another convenient location for community citizens.

Excavation is underway in preparation for the new Walmart which will provide Hendersonville with yet another convenient shopping place.

Year in Review

▲ President and Mrs. Reagan greeted Pope John Paul II when he arrived in Miami to begin a nine-city tour of the United States.

▶ The Dow Jones industrial stock average dropped 508 points, the largest in history on Monday, October 19, 1987. Some called it a "crash," others called it a "meltdown," and yet others called it "Black Monday." Whatever it was, it stripped $500 billion from the market value of U.S. securities.

"I had many good times at West. Many of those times were in Yearbook. I learned very much. I am thankful for Christy and Jenni who made my job easier. I am also grateful to Mrs. Stakias who had enough faith in me to give me the job. Also, the members of the staff were hard workers, and they deserve any credit. Lastly, I would like to thank my friends who helped make West what it was."

Tom

"It seems so hard to believe the Class of '88 is graduating this year. Leaving high school to try to conquer the world can be a scary thought. But I'll always carry memories with me, and I'll never forget my friends.

Being a co-editor was a hard job to fill, but hopefully the yearbook will be a success and something Falcons can look back on with pride in years to come. The Westwind Staff did a terrific job this year and deserve all the credit.

Mrs. Stakias, I have learned so much the past three years and you were a major reason for that. Thank you, and good luck on yearbooks to come."

Christy

"Until I became a senior, I never realized the real meaning and implications of graduating. I can hardly believe it's time for me to leave everything I've grown up with and start into the harsh realities of the real world.

Working on the yearbook has been a very rewarding experience. As co-editor, this year was even more exciting. Westwind staff, well, you were all great. I hope the book will turn out as well as planned.

A big thank you is in order to our adviser Mrs. Stakias. She has put up with so much, and her advice and input are much appreciated, although it wasn't always what we wanted to hear. Best of luck to everyone, especially the Class of '88!"

Jenni

PRIME TIME

Goodbyes are never easy, and this year was no exception. As the '87-'88 school year drew to a close, most students looked back at the great times shared at West Henderson. Seniors found graduation came a little too soon and saying goodbye to lifelong friends was harder than they had expected. After a summer, that as always will be too short, the underclassmen will return for another year or two. Yes . . . high school memories can never be forgotten, and as the years go by, they will be recognized as Prime Times.

PRIME TIME

With the end of the '87-'88 school year, another chapter ended in the lives of West Henderson students. Graduation meant change for everyone. Seniors made plans for their futures, and underclassmen were ready to move up, on their way to their own graduations. Having their best year ever behind them and a bright future at hand, most students were very optimistic, after all . . . this was, is, and will continue to be, our Prime Time!
